ferences of New York men and the culmination of the plan in the Silver Bay conference in July, 1911, when 318 men from 97 cities in the states and provinces went at the King's business. Prohibition Speaker Received Rotten Eggs First Time in Seven Years. Stonington, remarked Charles J. Hall, national lecturer for the prohi-tition party, in the course of an ad-dress Sunday afternoon on the Frank-lin street park, is the first place where he said, just as earnestly and enthus-isatically as if it were their own bus-iness. The moement is born of a real lin street park, is the first place where he has had a rotten egg thrown at him in seven years. While speaking for the cruse in that place on Saturday evening at 7 o clock the meeting was broken up by a hostile element.

On the park here on Sunday, however, Mr. Hall could not complain of the reception he received, for he was listened to with attention, frequently listened to with attention, frequently applanded at his witty sallies, and he had an audience of over 100 who stayed all through his talk. He was introluced by County Organizer E. A. Smith after Bugler Clarence Parker had played a number of selections on his basis as they would political or economic news.

It is a movement so wide that it will not stop until it reaches every corner. Seventy-eight cities with 2,118 committeemen have already enlisted,
and it is to sweep not only America,
but across the seas and the world.
We seem to hear these words: Arise,
He calleth you. Mr. Hall attacked the liquor traffic right from the start, opening by say-ing that he had no apologies to offer ing that he had no apologies to offer for the cause he was advocating, for the traffic was all bad and no good, a devastator of the home and of business, bringing dishonor to the flag and a blasphemer against God. It is ashamed of its product, it takes a man's morals and his money and we ought to bury it. The opponents of prohibition say that it will make the grass grow on the streets. It will grass grow on the streets. It will, It will grow on the street to the jail, but that's the street we want it to grow on.

He raised a laugh when he told his hearers that he knew he was coming to conservative New England and gave them the western definition of a con-servative—one who hasn't sand enough servative—one who hasn't sand enough to fight or legs enough to run away. Somebody ought to lick such a man. The liquor traffic takes $2,275,000,000 of the workingmen's money every year and is a direct competitor of every there line of business. It's the business side of this question which is bringing prohibition in so many places. Out of the minorities the majorities will grow and it's the everlasting prowill grow and it's the everlasting pro test against injustice and wrong that is going to tell on American citizenship. You can't pray the traffic down or talk it down or resolute it down, but you can vote it down, and that's the thing to do now, he said in conclusion desired by Mrs. James A'Arti to give up Angelis, and Constable Stanton was sent to New Britain after him. He reached there about 9 o'clock Saturday reached there about 9 o'clock Saturday night, and found the house where Angelis was staying, on North Stanley street. As the doctor's certificate stated he is sick abed, the constable was not allowed to move him. This made it certain that he is not shamming. Mrs. D'Arti has two weeks in which to produce him, or forfeit the $300.
